“ I just heard the news of Frank's passing from his nephew Steve. It bought a tear to my eye. I live in the Madison area and always loved to stop by his shop when I was in the Milwaukee. I drove truck and made many deliveries to him on Muskego Ave back in the 80's. I later became a salesman and sold him pork for his many sausages. I miss talking to you twice a week. It brings back many great memories of what life used to be like. I miss you Frank and wish i could stop by the store and smell the sausage!! Maybe i will drive by and peek in the window!! I hope it is still there!!

“ Today, our ancestors feast on Kishka, Krakowska and Landjaeger in the hereafter -- I have no doubt they've been jealous of the delights Frank treated us to all these years.

I was introduced to Frank through his work -- and if our work speaks for us, Frank's bold and flavorful treats belied his gentle, soft spoken nature. Meeting him was meeting a rock star, spending time in his make room was hushed moments in a hallowed sacristy. When we talk about the beating heart of Old Milwaukee, Frank was the very lifeblood that pumped within it.

I'm so honored to have been able to bear witness to just a little slice of his kielbasa of a life, so thankful to have savored the fruits of his labor and his gentle countenance. Photographing him was the honor of a lifetime, heeding his wisdom was sublime. Thank you, Rodzina Jakubczak, for sharing your husband, father, grandfather. Thank you, Frank, for your kindness, joy, passion and talent. Thank you for holding a bright light out front of that first issue of Edible Milwaukee, for being our harbinger and talisman through the early days of writing about the city that we love.

We miss you, Frank. I'm taking solace knowing that you've made a mark in this world, and in so many hearts -- I know you'll live on with every single person you've touched.

“ I'm saddened to hear of Frank's passing. He was a wonderful part of the community. Myself and the girls at the bank loved him dearly. I wish I could be there to share with the family our cherished memories of Frank. I'll be working. Sending my love to his family.

“ Frank made wonderful sausages that I would drive from Wind Lake to purchase. He made thousands of Holidays Dinners so extra special! What a wonderful man! Rest In Peace my friend.
