“ Gary was a grandfather figure to me that i never had growing up. I met him when I was about a teenager. I loved being in his presence. He was a comedian and always made me laugh. Sometimes I couldn't take him serious because he had glasses that made his eyes look magnified much like a cartoon character. He was a really good man, loved his family, called me his dolly and even considered my cousin nick (r.i.p) as his family as well. I wish I would have seen him once more and i wish he was able to meet my baby boy. I had a dream that i was at his house and i was with grandma carolyn. We heard a knock at the door and she went up to open it. I was laying down and as she opened the door, he was there with a more youthful appearance he was walking normally like he was no longer suffering. I was a little shocked and was a little confused because I was thinking how am I seeing him if he was in heaven? Though at the same time, he hugged me and I got a feeling of “I came to say goodbye” which made me feel better since I didn't get to. I was happy when i woke up because I know he came to me, but at the same time I wasn't ready to say goodbye and I didn't want him to leave. I remember watching a movie with him in the dining room area and a bird came and hit the glass and i asked him if he heard/saw it and he did. He said it made him jump (his belly jiggled lol). We had plenty of good times and jokes. I really loved him like he was my blood grandfather. It's still sinking in for me but i know he watching over us.
