“ Robert was one of my closest friends. He's been gone for about six weeks now and not a day goes by where I don't think, oohh he'd know what to do about this or I'd see a funny meme and instantly think to send it to him. He was a great man. He loved his wife, kids and grandson. We would trade grandkid pictures and stories all the time. He was proud of his kids too, he'd always talk about them. Especially his daughter. He was SO proud of her. He was so overly critical of himself. If what he was doing didn't go as planned he'd get so frustrated and grumpy, it generally ALWAYS turned out better than he thought it would. But he definitely was his own worst critic. He had a wicked sense of humor. He would say something and manage to keep a straight face until he got the other person's reaction. Robert had a heart of gold. He was always willing to help. My daughter is forever grateful for him fixing her AC on the hottest day of the year for her. He did stuff like that. He was kind had the biggest heart and the best smile. (Unless it was the smile he gave when he really wasn't happy with something - that one was much more piercing) I miss him dearly. I sincerely hope his family is coping with his loss. My deepest sympathies to all of them. He was truly one of a kind.
